Art Curriculum Expanding In Greenbelt Schools

by Julie Depenbrock

It is 4 p.m. on Tuesday and most kids at Greenbelt Middle School are on their way home. But one group of seventh graders stays after on a mission: to make a movie.

"They organized all of this," graphic design teacher Cortland Jones said. "I was just told, 'Mr. Jones, we're meeting in your room on the 13th.'"

The students met during National Arts in Education Week – September 11 through 17 – a week that passed without emphasis, according to teachers, because here art education is emphasized year-round.

Greenbelt schools have seen a resurgence in art since Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) CEO Kevin Maxwell has championed art integration into the curriculum in his first two years as superintendent.

Greenbelt Elementary art teacher Zsolt Nagy, who graduated from Towson University with an art education degree in 2012, has seen the changes firsthand. "My first two years, I was at three schools," Nagy said. "The art program in Prince George's wasn't as elaborate back then."

At the elementary level, Nagy said, art teachers were often shared among three or four schools.

Now teaching full time at Greenbelt Elementary, he focuses much of his instruction on integrating subjects like science, math and social studies. Right now, his second graders are making clay sundials. "So it's kind of a lesson in integrating time and how time was told before electricity," Nagy said.

Magnolia Elementary art teacher Jessica Wade still teaches at two schools, but she's optimistic about the improvements.

"It's an exciting time to be in Prince George's County," she said. Trained as a set designer in theater, Wade loves to see her

City Manager Updates Council On Capital Projects, Budgets

by Diane Oberg

The hot topic of the September 14 city manager update was where to put a dog park in the core of Greenbelt. Other topics were a review of other capital projects, a current and prior year budget update and consideration of a renters' tax credit.

Capital Projects

The worksession was unusually well attended, with most of the attendees there to support a second dog park. Council moved a little closer to making a decision on whether and where to create such a park by narrowing the list of potential sites identified by city staff.

The Department of Planning and Community Development will be asked to study the cost and feasibility of three sites: Parcel 7 on Ivy Lane, where an underused basketball court is currently located; opposite 101-105 Ridge Road, adjacent to the existing playground; and the former Candy Cane City location near Roosevelt Center and Braden Field.

Councilmember Silke Pope pushed hard for progress on the dog park while Mayor Emmett Jordan noted that council needs to consider how best to balance its many priorities for capital projects.

From the council discussion, some of the desired characteristics for a dog park location are city owned (to avoid the expense of purchasing land), not in the forest preserve, flat, with few trees (some are good for shade but too many could impede the ability of the dogs to run) and adequate parking nearby.

The capital projects identified during the budget review for Fiscal Year 2017 have not changed so most of the discussion was on the projects that are not included in the plan for the next five years. As this was a worksession, council made no final decisions

GCF Offers Many Resources To Community Organizations

by Yeri Zinn

The Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) was established to help worthwhile projects in Greenbelt. Since its founding, over $150,000 has been invested into 50 projects in the community. Projects include helping organizations such as the Greenbelt Farmers Market, the Lady Angels basketball team, Our Ladies of Charity food bank and many more. The vision is "for a thriving, engaged community that is socially responsible, environmentally conscious and supports education, the arts and sciences." This vision is achieved by providing financial assistance and other resources to local community organizations in Greenbelt.

GCF provides grants for community organizations twice a year, and the fall deadline for applying is October 15. The spring deadline is April 15. GCF also provides non-monetary resources throughout the year to help organizations reach their goals. GCF's website contains diverse resources. One tool is proposal writing guidelines designed to help organizations with the grant application process. The website also provides a list of meeting venues in Greenbelt. This can be particularly helpful if an organization does not have a central headquarters at which they can readily meet. An updated press list is also available, and this can help organizations reach out to the press to publicize upcoming events and activities throughout Greenbelt.

The newest resource that GCF is excited to share with the community is a video teaching organizations how to use Facebook to market an event. Users can watch the video and follow along on their Facebook page in order to create an effective Facebook event that will encourage the public to attend. During the early phases of the Explore Your Greenbelt campaign, GCF noticed that many of their partner organizations were not on Facebook engaging with their audience. As a response, GCF thought it would help organizations get over the technology barrier by making a step-by-step video on how to make a Facebook event, but more importantly, how to market it.

GCF has been actively working on engaging with the community and has seen success through increased "likes" on Facebook. A popular feature on the Facebook page is Trivia Tuesday – every Tuesday, GCF posts a photograph of a place somewhere in Greenbelt and users have a week to guess where the photograph was taken. GCF encourages other community organizations to engage with Facebook to garner support for their goals and missions.

Letters to the Editor

Thank You Greenbelt

I personally, and on behalf of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee, cannot thank the employees and the citizens of the City of Greenbelt enough for our most successful Labor Day Festival in years.

Starting with Rebekah Sutfin, who attends our meetings, always has a level head, offers good suggestions and keeps us on point. She's a jewel and we appreciate her.

Under the direction of Mr. Jim Sterling, Public Works jumped more than once to our rescue. Every public works employee was helpful, professional and hard working. We appreciate Public Works and Mr. Sterling very much and simply could not do this without them. Thanks for being such a large part of our Labor Day Festival.

The Greenbelt Police Department officers always remain calm in tense situations. They are always just a phone call away and I am proud to say I live in Greenbelt with the best police department around. Thank you to Chief Craze and all of the Greenbelt police officers for their dedication to a successful festival. A special thank you to Captain Kemp who attends our meetings and goes that extra mile to keep us safe. He is always willing to help with good advice or just the right answer.

A special thanks to the City of Greenbelt for letting us take over the center of town every year for 62 years! Every single employee we contact is helpful and goes the extra mile.

We also want to thank the Navy Sea Chanters for an enchanted concert at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, especially Bill Edwards, who also sang the National Anthem at the opening ceremonies. My personal thank you to the best committee I could have ever joined. Every volunteer is so dedicated to this yearly festival.

Every detail is thought out and perfected. These folks are simply some of the greatest residents of Greenbelt you will ever meet. I can't thank them enough. They deserve a huge pat on the back. Our most thanks go to each and every volunteer and festival goer!

Memories were made this weekend, and we hope that memories will be made for many, many generations to come. Thank you Greenbelt for letting our committee bring you such good memories and thank you to the residents of Greenbelt, for being a part of our success and our memories of the 2016 Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. See you all in 2017!

Claim of Alarm A Distraction

This is a response to the article, Zoning Rewrite Raises Alarm about Municipal Authority, written by Kathleen Gallagher and published in the September 1 edition of the Greenbelt News Review.

The topic of the article is the Greenbelt City Council (the council) worksession held on August 17 with Chad Williams from the Prince George's County Planning Department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The Planning Department is comprehensively rewriting the County Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations, which are the laws that determine how property in Prince George's County can be developed. The rewrite consists of three modules. Williams is the project manager for the rewrite and provided an update on Module 2.

According to Gallagher, the council expressed concern about two features of the rewrite: 1) the City of Greenbelt is categorized as being entirely inside the Beltway, and 2) the rewrite will undermine the ability of citizens and municipalities (like Greenbelt) to review and oppose new development projects. But the council has not appeared alarmed at all; it is the community that is alarmed.

The rewrite currently categorizes Greenbelt as being entirely inside the Beltway even though not all areas of Greenbelt are physically inside the Beltway. (According to Williams, the council made this recommendation in 2001 in support of the 2002 Prince George's County Approved General Plan. The categorization, in the rewrite, is a continuation of that recommendation.) According to Williams, this means all areas of Greenbelt will, in the rewrite, be considered as urban and subject to development rules applicable to urban areas. The council, according to Williams, can request the Planning Department to change this categorization – but has not done so in time to meet the regular deadline (September 1).

We believe the council supports the urban categorization because it may allow higher density development throughout Greenbelt, including the Lakeside North High-Rise Development, which appears to have the council's, but not the community's, support.

On April 4 the council held a worksession with David Hillman, president of Southern Management Corporation (SMC) and owner of Lakeside North Apartments, to discuss his proposal to

I Just Wanna Hold Your Hand

Coming to the Old Greenbelt Theatre this Friday, September 23 is The Beatles: Eight Days a Week - the Touring Years, a meticulous documentary of Beatlemania from 1963 to 1966, chock full of concert footage, interviews with the Fab Four, memories by celebrities (Whoopi Goldberg, Sigourney Weaver) and cultural assessment of the Beatles' unprecedented impact (Malcolm Gladwell).

It should be bittersweet for baby boomers, 20-ish then, 70-ish now, to see Paul and Ringo then and now and the deceased John and George, forever young. Go with someone whose hand you wanna hold and you'll feel fine.

Jimmy “Tator” Williams

by Rick Ransom

Jimmy Williams in the hospital.

James Anthony “Jimmy” or “Tator” Williams, a life-time Greenbelt resident and a frequent presence in Roosevelt Center, died on September 7 from lung cancer. He was 56. He had resided with his parents, Jeff and Mildred Louise, in the 73 Court of Ridge Road but had no fixed address for the most part after the death of his parents. His friend Tim Corley stated that he sometimes called himself The King of the Center Bums, a term anyone who spent their youth in Greenbelt would understand. Jimmy is survived by sisters Ellen Dietz of Salisbury and Wilma Breen of Brandywine, as well as brothers Jeff Jr., JT of Ocean City and Joey of Felton, Del.

Williams lacked a steady source of income, although he labored at painting and landscaping when he could find the work. The friends I spoke with said that Jimmy never refused to help others whenever and however he could. Corley said Williams helped him move and for a time, accompanied Corley’s son home from school. By the time Corley returned home from work, Williams had gotten the son started on his homework.

Amy D’Esposito reminisced about having been Williams’ friend since the age of seven. She noted that they both served internships at GHI in the youth training program. D’Esposito was with Williams at the end, helping him get admitted to hospice, although he lived just one day after admission. D’Esposito recounted that Jimmy was very funny and tried to make the best out of every situation. She stated that she admired his integrity; according to her, his word was his bond. “He was someone with whom you could leave $10,000 in cash

(if you had it) for two weeks and return to find every dollar,” she claimed.

Former longtime Greenbelter Glynnis Reslock (née Beaird) echoed the idea that Williams had a heart of gold. “He would do anything for you and he wouldn’t take money,” she related. Williams, after learning his illness was terminal, expressed a desire to attend his last Labor Day Festival. Reslock borrowed a wheelchair from a friend’s church and pushed him around the rides and booths. He was grateful to all for the experience. He died a mere three days later. Corley listed Williams’ friends as Frank White, Sean Clerkin, Duke Perry, Donnie and Frank Dorsey and Amy’s husband, Steve, as well as the late Terry Walton. Williams spent five years living with Walton on Crescent Road as a caretaker in the later stages of his friend’s battle with muscular dystrophy.

It is easy to judge a person by their circumstances. But quick assessments cannot divine a person’s heart or the history and incidents that led to his or her status. Williams didn’t have much, but he contributed his time and support in meaningful ways whenever he could. Williams donated his body to science because he stated that he didn’t want anyone to have to pay for funeral or burial arrangements. A memorial service will be held in Room 201 of the Community Center, 15 Crescent Road, from noon to 3 p.m. on Saturday, October 1. Those who can attend are encouraged to bring a covered dish and any photos they could share. Corley also asked for donations to be made there so that he and other friends can purchase a plaque in Williams’ memory.

Janet Meetre

by Cathie Meetre

Janet Meetre died Monday, September 12, 2016 after a brave 18-month battle with multiple myeloma, a cancer of the blood. Janet was born February 2, 1942, in Washington, D.C. There will be a celebration of her life at 166 Research Road in Greenbelt on October 9 from 2 to 5 p.m. Friends are invited to stop by for whatever length of time is convenient. It will be an informal setting where Janet’s friends and family can gather to share stories and honor her memory. Janet’s lifelong interest in piano will be celebrated with some live performances.

Janet was raised in Hyattsville, where her family owned a diner on Route 1. She attended Hyattsville Elementary, Hyattsville Junior High and Suitland High Schools. She graduated from the University of Maryland in 1964 with a major in Spanish and headed for California to work in the airline industry, though her ambition was to play piano and sing professionally. She was in flight reservations and was an early computer operator for Trans World Airlines. She later managed cargo at Pan American Airlines. Her work for the airlines also allowed her to travel, and she visited many countries. Janet kept fond memories of the many friends she made during this time.

The airline industry proving a fickle employer, Janet went to work as a travel coordinator with Mattel Toys. With Mattel, Janet experienced one of her favorite trips of all time when she got to drive the real-life, full-sized Barbie Beach Bus from California to Las Vegas and then on to Nashville, Tennessee. Honk if you love Barbie.

In 1994 she went to work for the U.S. Department of Customs and Border Patrol (CBP) as an inspector. In 2007, she transferred back to this area to be closer to her family and assist CBP with the implementation of new computer systems. She moved into a block home on Eastway in Greenbelt. She enjoyed life in Greenbelt, made many delightful friends, volunteered for the News Review and was a regular participant at the Aquatic & Fitness Center. She especially enjoyed having weekly Sunday dinner with her brothers Jeff and Rick, prepared by sister-in-law Cathie. As her illness progressed, she moved to a one-level apartment in Westchester Park, where she was met with much kindness from the staff and residents.

Janet enjoyed travel and music and was a tuneful and capable pianist and singer. She could also speak, read and write Spanish at an effective level. She was a devotee of the TV series Golden Girls and had a life-long interest in aviation, which became part of her life again when she volunteered at the College Park Aviation Museum.

She will be greatly missed by her brothers, Jeff and Rick Meetre; her sister-in-law Cathie Meetre; nieces Lisa Psaromatis, Sarah Liska and Jenny Meetre, as well as her many grand-nieces and nephews.

For those wishing to make donations in her name, the College Park Airport receives donations online at fieldoffirsts.com/donate-online.

Survey Deems Springhill Lake Apartments Historic Complex

by Chris Miller

There's a sign on Southway directing drivers to Historic Greenbelt. It turns out there should be multiple arrows, since the Library of Congress deemed Springhill Lake (SHL) apartments (renamed Franklin Park at Greenbelt Station) an important historic complex, and in 2005 published historic black-and-white photographs of SHL.

The photos were taken by the Historic American Building Survey (HABS), a division of the U.S. National Park Service, said Megan Young, the Greenbelt Museum director and curator. HABS was designed to document historic buildings in the U.S. Records of the historic photographs are archived in the Prints and Photographs Division of the Library of Congress.

When SHL was first built in the mid-1960s it was reputed to be the largest garden apartment development on the East Coast. Theresa Hammonds, the director of leasing at Franklin Park, says it is still the largest development east of the Mississippi River.

Franklin Park has over 153 acres of land, 2,877 total units, houses over 12,000 people and comprises 60 percent of the total Greenbelt population, Hammonds said. Franklin Park is so vast that an elementary school, Springhill Lake, even resides on the property. "It's a world in a world," says Hammonds.

About seven years ago, SHL apartments transitioned into Empirian Village and in October 2010, Fieldstone Properties acquired the development and it became Franklin Park at Greenbelt Station.

According to Brian Butler, Springhill Lake Recreation Center coordinator, the development seems much safer now than it was in the past. "Before, it was a little more turbulent and rowdy," he says, explaining how it was common for children living in the apartments to simply stop coming to the Recreation Center. Now though, the apartments seem a lot more college student-oriented and more diverse, Butler says.

Greenbelt's History

Springhill Lake's home city has a unique history.

Greenbelt was founded in 1937 by President Franklin Roosevelt's administration through his New Deal programs, specifically the Resettlement Administration. Franklin Park was named in honor of the president, says Young.

Greenbelt was one of three green towns, along with Greendale, Wisc., and Greenhills, Ohio, created as part of a social experiment to create new communities in areas with affordable housing and ample gardens and parks. The belt of vast green space surrounding the city was how Greenbelt got its name. Greenbelt was created also to help ease the housing shortage near Washington, D.C., and to create new jobs.

The federal government owned Greenbelt until 1952, when it sold the city to a local cooperative, Greenbelt Homes, Inc. The cooperative later sold large areas of vacant land to private developers.

SHL and its successors have helped to form the makeup of Greenbelt. "The complex has been the cornerstone of the Greenbelt community for over 40 years," says Hammonds.

Franklin Park currently has over 93 percent occupancy and is in the process of renovating and upgrading its units.

The SHL photos can be seen on the Library of Congress website at loc.gov/pictures/item/md1700/.

build a 25-story, 400-unit luxury high-rise apartment building on land adjacent to the existing Lakeside North Apartments. Hillman conceded that SMC would not fight if the council expressed serious opposition to the proposal – but the council has not expressed this opposition.

Council has had over three months to respond to our June 6 petition asking the council to write to Hillman to express opposition to the proposed Lakeside North Development and to ask him not to proceed with the proposal. A petition to stop the Lakeside North Development has been signed by over 500 Greenbelt residents and we are still collecting signatures. Despite community opposition, the council has not openly opposed the proposed development. Additionally, the property would have to be rezoned to allow for the proposed development. SMC may be seeking to bypass the normal rezoning process altogether by obtaining special treatment, perhaps under the ongoing rewrite. The June 6 petition asked the council to write to County Councilmember Todd Turner to object to any plan to avoid a rezoning case by getting special treatment through the rewrite. The council has been silent here as well.

The council owes the community a response to our June 6 petition.

The claim that the council is alarmed should not distract attention from the real issue, which is the apparent desire by council to keep secret its position on high density development in Greenbelt.

students take risks. "They really build individuality and a sense of self, I think, through the creative arts and sort of recognizing their own style, patterns, the way they draw," Wade said.

Wade hopes to do more environmental art – maybe hang mobiles from trees in the courtyard or do something with the changing leaves. "Students get to use all the materials around them to create something and also see that art can happen everywhere," Wade said. "It's not just in the art room."

Back at Greenbelt Middle School, Jones, a graduate of the Corcoran School of Art who celebrates his 24th year of teaching this October, praises the county's support – especially that of Elizabeth Stuart, visual arts supervisor for PGCPs.

"I can only do all the stuff that I'm doing because I've been given that liberty," Jones said. "I think it enhances the children's motivation to reach the boundaries as well as move past them because they're being instructed by somebody who clearly has been allowed huge parameters."

His classroom is his biggest resource – from the Mac computers to the display board, which Jones landed by writing a grant to the Greenbelt Community Foundation two years ago.

"It inspires me to be in this room," Jones said. "As far as resources, I've been provided everything I need to be effective."

The room allows students the freedom of self-expression, which is crucial to Jones.

One of his students is designing a logo for a non-profit organization. Others, he's introduced to local authors in need of illustrators. Still others have found their passion on PowerPoint, designing magazine covers.

And what's the name of that movie the seventh graders are making?

The Start of Something New, said Anya Wilkinson, student director.

This is the second year that students at Greenbelt Middle have made a movie, Jones said. Both projects have been entirely student-driven and executed.

In January, B-Roll Media and Arts, a Maryland-based non-profit, is coming to help students film a documentary on literacy at the middle school. If successful, the film will be shown at the Old Greenbelt Theatre.

"It's helping them to see that these skills and abilities they have – they don't have to wait until they're adults to make use of them, to do something significant," Jones said.

in the meeting.

One such project, the water fountain in Roosevelt Center, appeared likely to be scratched from the list now that the city has the TapIt program to refill water bottles for the public. This item will likely appear on the agenda of a future city council regular meeting as it has been the subject of a petition to council that needs to be closed out.

Councilmember Judith Davis put in a plug for replacing the heating, ventilation and air conditioning system for Old Greenbelt Theatre. According to the theater director, Davis said, this project cannot be put off any longer. However, this will be an expensive project. The Friends of Greenbelt Theatre are planning a capital campaign but City Manager Michael McLaughlin said there needs to be discussion as to the purpose of this campaign – renovations desired by the theater group or renovations to the city-owned building.

Jordan urged finding a way to recoat the Youth Center foam roof in the next year or two, saying that it is in really bad shape.

Councilmember Leta Mach called for funding expansion of the Greenbelt Cemetery by installation of an urn wall. However, Davis noted, this would entail cutting down “a swath of trees.”

Renters’ Relief

Assistant City Manager David Moran reported on the status of Council Action Request 45 from 2015 regarding whether Greenbelt should offer a renters’ tax credit. He noted that the State of Maryland has a renters’ tax credit for very low income residents of up to $750 per year. Eligibility is based upon the renter’s household income, net worth and monthly rent excluding utilities for seniors and disabled residents. For residents under age 60 additional factors are considered. According to staff research in 2015 there were 24 recipients of the state credit in Greenbelt’s zip code, although some may live outside the corporate limits of Greenbelt.

In 2015, Prince George’s County established a similar program where the county provides a grant of 50 percent of the state payment to eligible residents. Moran’s written report proposed that the city could mirror the county program.

The councilmembers appeared interested in pursuing this approach. This will require a city ordinance repealing an inactive program from 1973 and implementing the new program. McLaughlin noted that it is too late for the program to take effect for 2016. (The application deadline for the state was September 1.)

This item will likely appear on a future council agenda.

Budget

There was good news and bad in City Treasurer Jeff William’s budget update. For FY17, which started July 1, the city is on track with the adopted budget.

For Fiscal Year 2016, there was bad news on the tax front. Major commercial property owners were granted abatements (reductions in property tax) by the state. There were 13 properties receiving abatements of more than $5,000. These totaled more than $400,000 in FY16 and more than $1.3 million over the 2014 to 2016 assessment cycle. As a result, the general fund balance (essentially reserves) dropped to roughly 11 percent from 13 percent. This is still above the city’s 10 percent target, however.

2001 Bond Fund

The city continues to show a deficit in this fund. The 2001 Bond Issue funded projects including the public works building, renovations to the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, traffic calming projects in Greenbelt East and renovation of the theater. In FY16, the city transferred $300,000 from the general fund to bring the deficit down to just over $1 million.

Jordan asked if this fund could be closed out or renamed. Williams said that since this fund does not have a revenue source (now that the initial bond proceeds are gone) the only way to close it out would be a transfer from the General Fund. Doing so would cut the fund balance by roughly one-third.

When asked how a bond fund could have a deficit, since the funds had been spent and had to have come from somewhere, Williams told the News Review that the city’s Consolidated Financial Statement differs from the budget presentation in that (on page 44 of the Fiscal Year 2015 statement) it shows the city’s total fund balance as $2.5 million, as it adds the General Fund balance (unassigned funds) of $3.8 million and the deficit in the 2001 bond fund and reports a total fund balance of $2.5 million. The fund balance monitored by council only reflects the General Fund.

City Notes

Planning Staff prepared a brief of the status/goals of bike planning in Greenbelt for the Inter-Municipal Bikeways Working Group.

Public Works and Horticulture staff met to discuss the purchase of new trees from the Pepco rebate.

Street Maintenance/Special Details crews took steel cans to the county scrap metal yard and also dumped 55 barrels filled with water and oil into a recycling tank.

The Youth Center gym floor refinishing project is complete.

Aquatic & Fitness Center staff, with the assistance of the Greenbelt Police Department, conducted in-service training for cashiers and pool managers, discussing ways to deal with hostile and confrontational situations.

The Fall Walk With Ease class has begun at Schrom Hills Park, with participants taking the Schrom Hills path and learning about arthritis and exercise. The Walk With Ease/Walk on Route 66 group in the community center gym has walked from Greenbelt and is almost in Cumberland, on their way to L.A. via virtual Route 66.

Volunteer Opportunity For Public Lands Day

Security Camera Meetings Scheduled in October

by Stan Zirkin

As noted in the News Review’s front page article on June 23, the city council has asked the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) to conduct public hearings on security camera issues affecting Greenbelt. Those meetings have now been scheduled for October.

The first meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 5 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, 6101 Cherry Lane. The second meeting will be held on Saturday, October 8 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Greenbriar Community Center, 7600 Hanover Parkway, #101. The third and final meeting will be held on Saturday, October 15 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Municipal Building Council Room, 25 Crescent Road. Any Greenbelter may attend any of the meetings.

At present there are a total of 61 security cameras in the city: 17 in the Community Center; five in and around Public Works; three at Roosevelt Center; 12 in and around the Aquatic & Fitness Center; 19 in and around the police station; two outside of Springhill Lake Elementary School; and two at the Spellman Overpass. The city’s Information Technology branch, whose director is Dale Worley, manages all of the cameras except for those at the Community Center and Public Works.

Those locations are maintaining legacy systems that have been in place for some time.

The meetings will seek to elicit the public’s input on concerns relating to current security cameras; the need for additional security cameras; suggested locations for additional cameras; and reasons for each concern or suggestion. A police representative will be available to answer questions at the meetings. For those who are unable to attend in person, email comments or suggestions to stanley.zirkin@gmail.com.

Stan Zirkin is a member of PSAC and the News Review.

He will present health and culinary aspects of vegan and vegetarian diets and share resources provided by Jewish Veg (jewishveg.org).

The event is free and open to the public. Light, vegan refreshments will be served.

Plan for Progress at the New Deal Café

All-new menu items, an espresso bar, and expanded hours are part of the business plan to transition from contracted restaurant operation to self-management led by an experienced professional—like other Greenbelt co-ops. Earnings will belong to the Café rather than a for-profit contractor.

All members are encouraged to attend the upcoming Special Membership Meeting.

Motion for Discussion:

The Membership authorizes the Board of Directors, in its discretion, to solicit loans and donations up to $200,000, at up to the prevailing rate of interest. These funds will be used for the purpose of capital improvements and restaurant operations, as well as making other necessary modifications to the operation of the Café.

This motion is per Article 8, Section 7 of the Café bylaws, “The Board of Directors shall not borrow any money in excess of $10,000 total during any calendar year without approval by the membership.”

ACE Grant-Writing Workshop at GES
The Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) will hold a grant-writing workshop on Thursday, September 29 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Greenbelt Elementary School in the Media Center. The instructor will be Emmett Jordan.

The workshop is aimed at school administrators, teachers, parent-teacher association volunteers and community members from the seven ACE core schools: Greenbelt Elementary, Springhill Lake Elementary, Magnolia Elementary, Turning Point Academy, Dora Kennedy French Immersion, Greenbelt Middle and Eleanor Roosevelt High School. All are welcome to attend.

Successful grant proposal writing is a process that requires a strategic and systematic approach. This workshop will provide an overview of that process and offer some insight into effective grant development techniques. Topics will include: how to turn ideas into successful grant proposals, what to include in a grant proposal and identifying and researching potential funding sources.

Jordan is the mayor of Greenbelt and has extensive experience with grants. He has designed and implemented successful marketing, communication and fund-raising programs for educational, health care, cultural, and social service organizations for more than 25 years. He has worked with non-profit associations, businesses, universities and government agencies on grant writing and other fund-raising activities.

The program will share some information about how to apply for the ACE Grants to Schools program. The deadline for ACE grant proposals is November 1. For more information see: www.greenbeltnmd.gov.

The workshop is free and open to the public. Pre-registration is not required. Greenbelt Elementary School is located at 66 Ridge Road.

Solar Homes Tour Saturday To Feature Greenbelt Homes

Two Greenbelt homes are on the 2016 Tour of Solar and Green Homes, scheduled for Saturday, October 1, and Sunday, October 2 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sponsored by the Sierra Club, the Mid Atlantic Solar Energy Society and the American Solar Energy Society, the tour showcases 40 homes with environmentally-friendly features located throughout the Washington metropolitan area.

6 Pinecrest (exterior only on the tour) has a 6.02 KW photo voltaic system leased from Solar City. The 30 panels installed on two roof surfaces can sustain 130 mph winds. Each individual panel weighs less than 40 pounds, which facilitated construction without roof reinforcement. The system is configured so that if any one panel is in shade, that panel no longer generates power but the rest of the system continues to use the sun's energy. This home also features two Prius automobiles in the driveway and edible plants (blueberries, strawberries, asparagus and herbs) in the landscaping.

108 Ridge (whole house on the tour) is a passive solar residence designed and pre-engineered by Acorn Deck House. House siting and design, rather than manufactured devices, capture the energy of the sun and lessen generated energy demands. Large expanses of south-facing glass allow storage of winter sun heat in the concrete underlay of tile flooring. Light shafts through the front deck provide natural lighting to the lower level. Operable clerestory windows can vent hot air and draw cooler air from shaded areas. Massive trees provide shade in the summer and shelter from winter winds.

A guide to the complete 2016 Metropolitan Solar Homes Tour, downloadable from solartour.org, has detailed descriptions, directions, a map and photos of all featured homes.

J Davis Gets an Education While Exploring Cuba

by Jane Ulrich

As she stepped off the plane onto the steps leading to the tarmac, J Davis, accompanied by her sister, embarked on a journey to explore Cuba’s history, people and the introduction of private sector activity. “I made this trip now so that I could see what Cuba was like before the changes occur while Cuba rebuilds and modernizes,” she said.

Outside the airport, a line of classic 1950s cars waited for tourists, as well as a modern Chinese tour bus that would be used by her group, the Road Scholars, throughout the trip. The road to the hotel was filled with old cars and trucks, along with foreign-made cars, scooters and bicycles. But the vintage cars were not what Davis wanted to see the most. On this trip, she would meet ranchers from Camaguey and learn how the ranch interacts with and supports a local village. She would visit the Ché Guevara Memorial and Museum in Santa Clara, learn about fishing from a local coastal community, meet dancers in Guantanamo specializing in La Tumba Francesa, a song and drumming style that accompanies a fusion of West African and French colonial dances, and so much more. Each city and town would have a history, with plenty of fine food, dancing, arts, sports and schools. In 16 days of traveling on an island, however, they would not once stop at a beach as that isn’t considered educational.

From the tour bus, Davis saw houses, farms, community gardens and people selling items on their porches. She noticed people waiting in line at bus stops and street corners waving pesos at passing vehicles. If the tour bus had empty seats, it would have had to stop to pick up people according to Cuban law.

Tourists receive the best of what Cuba has to offer, Davis recounted. Tourism is one of the primary ways that the island state makes money. Only in Cuba can one convert dollars to (tourist) pesos. A 13 percent fee is assessed on all conversions and the entire fee goes back to the government. Tourists can get steak whereas a citizen may not be able to afford steak for ropa vieja, a Cuban dish of shredded meat, peppers and onions. The Cuban government sells licenses for all street performers, taxi drivers, restaurants and hotels. Licensed bed and breakfast lodgings are sprouting up everywhere.

The tour had a striking history lesson, she said. The six-lane highway that they were traveling on ended mid-commute. The tour bus went from a paved highway to a smaller country road. In 1991, before the “special period in a time of peace,” the highway that connected the island was halfway finished. This abrupt transition occurred when the USSR dissolved, stopped paying for 80 percent of Cuba’s exports and imports and stopped building the highway. From 1991 to 1995, most adult Cubans lost from 5 to 25 percent of their weight due to a shortage of food.

Davis remarked that resources are not taken for granted in Cuba. It is not uncommon to make the items that you need out of what you have on hand or can find.

Once the great exodus occurred in the 1950s, she said, Fidel Castro gave housing rights to the people wherever they lived. For example, the maid of a former household might become the owner of a lavish house. As more people needed housing, more people crowded into a large house. Each person would then own a room or set of rooms. The difficulty was that no one person was responsible for the upkeep of the whole building, and no one, not even the government, had the resources to renovate. Since Raúl Castro has stepped in as president, many laws have eased. Private business is possible, homes may now be bought and sold, pay rates are no longer equal and natural resources are being discovered. There are large oil fields off the coast of Cuba, but the impact on nearby pristine coral reefs is being studied. Overfishing could become a problem.

The group’s tour guide was rarely out of sight during the trip. Davis and the others could not freely travel on their own; however, they were sometimes given free time to shop at markets or to go to a restaurant. Even so, she believes the trip was informative, with friendly interaction with a variety of Cubans. Davis is very curious to see what the next 10 years will bring to Cuba.

Artful Afternoon Features Synetic Theater and Masks

by Nicole DeWald

Art fans of all ages are invited to attend a free Artful Afternoon on Sunday, October 2 from 1 to 4 p.m. Sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department Arts Program, this event takes place at the Community Center. Reservations are not required.

At 3 p.m., members of the Synetic Theater company, based in northern Virginia, will perform The Miraculous Magical Balloon. Synetic is well-known for their astonishing and deeply impactful mainstage productions, including a wordless Macbeth for which they received five Helen Hayes Awards. The company combines music, dance, clowning and pantomime techniques to create highly energetic and expressive shows that transcend differences in language, culture and hearing ability. Developed especially to include young audience members, Balloon tells a wonderful story of a traveling actor and his magical trunk of tricks and toys. The running time for this show is approximately 45 minutes.

Prior to the performance, guests are invited to create their own mask in a workshop led by Celestine Ranney-Howes, an artist in residence at the Community Center and a professional costume designer. This activity will take place from 1 to 3 p.m. and all materials will be provided.

Visitors can also enjoy a studio open house and sale from 1 to 4 p.m. with the Community Center’s artists in residence. Eight artists currently hold studios at the center. The open house is a great opportunity to meet local talent and find affordable paintings, prints, collage, assemblage, funky art jewelry, tie dye, fiber arts, ceramic art tile and functional pottery.

The Greenbelt Museum’s Community Center exhibit space is currently hosting The Knowing Hands that Carve This Stone: The New Deal Art of Lenore Thomas Straus. Straus is best known locally as the creator of the iconic Mother and Child statue in the Roosevelt Center and the impressive bas reliefs on the façade of the Community Center.

For more local history, tour the Greenbelt Museum’s historic house at 10-B Crescent Road.

Exemplifying the residential core of this New Deal planned community, the house has been restored and furnished with objects from the period of 1936 to 1952. Tours provide visitors with a view of home life for ordinary Americans of modest means during the Great Depression and World War II. Docent-led tours are available on Sundays between 1 and 5 p.m. for a nominal fee; plan to arrive no later than 4:30 p.m.

See the online Fall Activity Guide for information about visual and performing arts classes for all ages along with Moonlit Movies, contra dances and other events.
